You Should Be A Model!

My Vision

Stop! Fraudulent Practices, and build a modeling and charm school based on integrity, honesty, and respect for other peoples dreams.

I heard that phrase many times in my life and I am sure you have too. What people don't realize is how much it would cost if the wrong person says it to you.

Many people dream of becoming a fashion model. Some save up every nickel and dime of their money to put together a portfolio or move to a big city to follow that dream. The problem is there are so many scam artist out there taking advantage of the inexperienced dreamer.

There are so many pitfalls to watch out for, if you don't know any better your dreams may never come true. That is why I decided it is time someone does something about it.

I wrote a book called "Six Steps Toward Success in Modeling" and I have created model workshops where the inexperienced can learn the most needed modeling skills and business sense without obligation to fulfill long term high priced courses.

The original concept of modeling schools was to teach poise, posture, etiquette and charm. These schools provided the social skills needed to make better individuals in society. As a result, graduates of charm and finishing school went on to become public figures, achieved higher status and notoriety. Unfortunately, many of today's schools and model agencies are fakes. Knowing the high demand for print, runway and commercial models, along with the large interest in this field, I have made it my business to inform, educate and open people's eyes to fraudulent practices.

My goal is to create a non-profit organization nationwide to teach legitimate techniques required of models. I want to give career guidance, consultation and I want to teach anyone who is interested about modeling.

My experiences in the United States and across the world, from Tokyo to Europe, have taught me everything a model really needs to know and understand before embarking on his or her own, personalized career in the profession.

This is a business of wolves and the traps are many! New, inexperienced and young models need to know what I have to teach them. I'm Jean Marshall. I'm available to you together, we can prepare you for an exciting and profitable career in modeling.
